For the last 27 years, Jeremy has worked with business leaders throughout the world to help prepare them to excel in complex and challenging times. He works in four main areas; conference speaking, facilitating board/senior executive team development, coaching business leaders in the peculiar challenges such seniority brings, and designing and delivering leadership workshops.

This theme of leading high performance is ever present; whether through developing individual mental toughness; self belief, motivation, focus and the ability constructively use pressure, facilitating high performance teams or helping to create a community of leaders who can capitalise on the opportunities thrown up by a radically changing workplace.

Jeremy has worked extensively across a broad range of industries and at all levels in business from CEO/Main Board of FTSE 100/Blue Chip companies through to first line managers and individual contributors on the 'Shop Floor'. As a business coach, he has at least 3,500 hours experience over the past 27 years.

Prior to being a speaker, coach and facilitator, Jeremy's career was equally rich and varied. He began his career as a professional pianist, studying at the Royal College of Music in London, after which he briefly ran a jazz band.

Seeking a different kind of excitement and challenge, he was then commissioned into the British Army as an Officer in The Life Guards, also serving subsequently with Airborne Forces. During his time in the Army, Jeremy taught leadership at the Royal Military Academy, Sandhurst, winning the Queen's award for the best trained platoon.

On leaving, Jeremy became a Head Hunter for three years, recruiting Board/Partner level Executives, before choosing to develop leaders instead, spending three years with a specialist Leadership Development company.

In 2000, Jeremy set up Jeremy Cox & Associates as an independent Leadership Development Firm and has since worked with leaders in over 150 different Companies, at least 30 of these at board level.

Outside of work, as well as spending time with his family, Jeremy reads widely, runs around the countryside, and plays Jazz piano.
